

Research Professional News, which publishes journalism focused on research, innovation and higher education policy, is looking for a freelance reporter based in a Nordic country to write a weekly bulletin starting in August.

The paid role requires journalism experience, ideally in a related field. Each bulletin involves pitching and writing one lead story of about 400 words, a second story of about 250 words and three short items of about 70 words each.

The role will include monitoring and covering public announcements and some original reporting. To find out more, please contact craig.nicholson@clarivate.com
